Our Project

Pattaya, Thailand is a city that is completely built around prostitution and sex trafficking. Many of the young girls (16-21) working in the bars were tricked into prostitution and are now indebted to bar owners and must work. There are additional aspects of child (ages 3 - 14) sex slavery happening throughout the city. It is a very broken place.

But there is hope. In that city, there are a handful of Thai and western urban workers who banded together to fight this human trafficking. It's a daunting task. But our partners are seeing breakthrough. Our fundraising efforts will expand the currently supported training and recovery center and launch an intervention program to prevent young guys and girls from even entering the brothels and bars. Hundreds of lives will be impacted.

This little boy's older brother was sold into sex slavery. Through programs funded by Eastside Women of Purpose, this little boy is in school and thriving.

FREEDOM STONES RECYCLED GLASS NECKLACE FROM GHANA

Freedom Stones - Breaking the chains of poverty & injustice.

One of the major underlying causes of human trafficking is poverty. Since 2005, Founder Leah Knippel has been fighting human trafficking through income generation projects aimed at not only providing financially for vulnerable women and their children, but also at empowering women through holistic training and skills development. Freedom Stones (incorporated in 2009) continues Leah's original vision that vulnerable families might have opportunity to earn individual incomes while also being given the tools to build stronger thriving communities in areas where poverty continues a cycle of slavery, oppression and injustice.
